01 SEASONAL INSIGHT

Cheoseo, when even mosquitoes retreat — drinks turn too

Cheoseo (Aug 23) is the solar term when "the heat stops." From this weekend, as morning and evening air turns, the weight of what guests order shifts. Koreans call this yearly snap in temperature "Cheoseo magic."

Whisky and warm sake, suppressed all summer —

Cheoseo is where the rebound begins.

Why now

Last issue's trend read "lighter, lower-ABV." When temperature breaks, it reverses: warm dishes, weightier drinks, indoor seats — the prepared store wins autumn's first guests.

02 ORDERING CHECKLIST

Three Changes to Start This Week

1 Whisky returns, on the rocks

Whisky ran -12% all summer. The rebound window opens after Cheoseo as evenings cool. Nudge up stock for on-the-rocks and neat pours — not the budget highball line.

2 Keep highballs, shift the center

Highball demand itself holds. But it's time to trim summer-only fruit flavors and rebuild around year-round steady sellers.

3 Patio → indoors: reset the floor

As nights cool, patio turnover slows first. Rebuild indoor seating share and defend average spend with hot pots and grilled dishes.

SHINJUKU · VISITED BY OUR CEO

Autumn Sake Trade — Tokyo Has Already Begun

Three spots from our July benchmarking trip — with behind-the-scenes stories and numbers never posted to Instagram, only in this report.

① Nakizakana · ② Toromasa · ③ Genka Sakagura

Nakizakana — Let Guests Pick the Fish, and Drinks Sell

① Pick 3 whole fish from the basket

② Half as sashimi — 3-kind platter

③ The other half grilled, steamed, or fried — your choice

Selling an experience, not an order

The moment a guest carries the okamochi box and picks their own fish, conversation starts and one more bottle sells. The same fish, once "the fish I chose," gets photographed — and a photo turns a dish into content.

How to apply it here

An autumn "pick today's fish" corner — any store with a tank or ice case can start this format with zero extra investment.

Toromasa —

Value isn't price — it's proof

Hokkaido, Sanriku, Sakai Port — origin names papered across walls and ceiling imprint not "cheap" but "cheap because it's direct." That's how the crowd widened to office workers, tourists, and couples.

The Bar That Sells Sake by the Degree — Genka Sakagura

Pay a ¥540 cover and taste Dassai- and Juyondai-class sake at cost, in 100ml pours. What struck us wasn't the price — it was how they sell temperature.

50°C	Jokan (上燗)	acidity softens, texture rounds out
45°C	Atsukan (熱燗)	steam rises · aroma sharpens
40°C	Nurukan (ぬる燗)	the most aromatic temperature — autumn pick ★
35°C	Hitohadakan (人肌燗)	skin-warm · rice umami turns gentle
5°C	Yukibie (雪冷え)	the temperature we sold all summer

After Cheoseo, "hot sake" is the open slot

Most Korean izakayas sell sake cold only. Rich-dry (noujun-karakuchi) styles come alive warmed — adding just two atsukan picks to your autumn menu sets you apart. Ask your rep for warming gear and sake picks.

04 Stores Trending Now

Torikizoku Euljiro-3-ga

All-items ₩4,900 yakitori. Its fourth Seoul store after Hongdae flagship, Yeonnam, and Hongik Univ. Station — the low-price, high-turnover format is accelerating downtown.

Yakitori Zanzan Icheon

A new yakitori house in Icheon — a signal that the yakitori-plus-highball pairing works even in outer-metro districts.

05 · Next Issue — Chuseok: Close or Open?

This year's Chuseok runs Sep 24 (Thu)–27 (Sun), an effective 4-day break. When is closing most labor-efficient? Should prime districts stay open? And how much advance stock covers the wholesaler shutdown, ordered by when? Next issue: the holiday math by district type.
