TO OUR OWNERS

The economy was always tough.
What changed isn't the economy —
it's the bar
customers want.

Closures are at a record high — true. Yet on the same street, some places still have a line.

This issue covers, in order: ① the cold
data, ② how the market is splitting, and ③
what you can change because of it.

PART 1

The cold reality

By the numbers, not by feel — where the dining market stands now

The 1-million-closure era

Nationwide business closures — past 1 million for the first time on record

1.008_M

Nationwide closures, 2024

Closure rate ~9% for two straight years ·
food service alone: 153,000 closures

By sector

Closures cluster in domestic-demand-sensitive sectors — food service and retail run about 2× the overall average.

1 in 6 dining businesses shuts down

Nationwide dining closure rate — now higher than during COVID

Dining closure rate (%)

* Jan-May 2025, provisional

On the ground

70.9% of closures cite "weak sales / falling profitability." Delivery expansion plus fixed costs (rent, labor) squeeze margins.

Seoul: 1 in 5

Top districts by dining closure rate, Jan-May 2025 (Seoul avg. 16.5%)

Flip it around

Even 'unbeatable Gangnam' is no exception. The prime districts carry the biggest rent and labor risk.

Of 10 openings, only 4 last 5 years

Survival rate, Seoul top-100 everyday trades

What it means

Opening isn't the hard part — staying open is. Half are gone within 3 years.

PART 2

The market is splitting

It's not 'everyone's dying.' Winners and losers are separating — here's the line

The rising signboards are a set list

Brands that added the most stores in H1 (openings + conversions)

Norang Tongdak		+42
Jadam Chicken		+41
BBQ		+39
Mexicana		+35

What they share

Chicken and value brands lead — low investment, delivery, fast turnover, easy prices. The tougher the economy, the more customers move to 'a light, easy drink.'

The survivors pivoted this way

74 places that changed signs instead of closing — the direction is the customer taste

Bboggaeul Snacks	→	BBQ
Crescent Dessert Cafe	→	Goobne Chicken
Ppalgan Dak	→	Pocha Jungmun
Chojangjip (Jangan)	→	Hansin Pocha
Shrimp Chef (Seorak)	→	Uirak

The direction

Independent snack shops, cafes and bars move toward pocha, chicken and casual brands. A 'pocha vibe' plus 'low price and turnover' is the format customers want now.

It's concept, not the economy

Same industry, diverging paths — opening rate vs. closing rate

Franchise (proven concept) net
+6.6%p

Open  21.5%

Close  14.9%

All incl. independents net decline
(opens < closes)

Youth-run eateries, 1yr · per 100 openings

New  100

Closed  127.5

Closure rate by type

Korean 19% > bars 14.2% > pizza 13.1% > chicken 12.1%. Whether the concept fits customer taste decides who survives.

PART 3

So how do you survive?

Applying where the data points to your own store

This is the store customers go to now

Tying 40,000 SNS needs to what rising trades share

1 A cold first glass

Draft beer and highballs. The first-glass refreshment is the reason to visit

2 Easy prices

Value, cost-efficiency, fast turnover. A 'come often, come light' structure

3 A relaxed pocha vibe

Casual and hip over formal. Easy for solo drinks or small groups

4 Variety and signatures

Flavored highballs, crafted draft (matcha, ube Sapporo)

5 Photo-worthy looks

Your store — how many apply?

Fewer than 3 below is a sign to review your concept

- ☐ Cold draft and highballs stand out as first-class menu
- ☐ Value snack sets drive repeat visits
- ☐ Interior and service are relaxed and casual (no formality)
- ☐ You have a signature glass (flavored or crafted draft)
- ☐ Menu and glassware come out photo-ready

CLOSING

Before blaming the economy, look again at the customer.

Downturns have always existed — and thriving stores have too. The difference is whether you matched what customers want now. Sewang will prepare your next move together, with data and supply.
